While traveling, observing, researching, constructing and creating, the curious little ones accumulated experience, the foundations of mutual trust and humane behavior with nature, the trips encouraged interest in natural phenomena and enjoyment of the constantly occurring natural wonders. Various experiments have become a fun activity for everyone. Children are given the opportunity to learn through experience. Meetings, trips, nature - a great field of learning and creativity, space for growth and improvement. The children experienced many good emotions and passed them on to their families. There was a lot of interest and support from families. Parents are grateful for the meaningful employment of children and the variety of activities during the summer.
